The partial skeletal remains of a female was found in a field near Highway 210, approximately 11 miles east of Missouri City, MO next to some farmland near Cooley Lake. The cause of death is undetermined. The victim's race is unknown but she could have been Caucasian, African-American, or Bi-Racial. Dental records, which are available, show that she had several unattended cavities, visible decay on both right upper incisors, and enamel hypoplasias which was possibly a result from a high fever.
