The skeletonized remains of a small build, white male, was located in inner-city St. Louis in a burned out vacant business building by workers who were removing gas service. The victim had short to medium length somewhat straight hair that was a light brown/blonde color, was possibly left handed, and had crooked teeth on the right upper side as well as four fillings. He had been wearing a black rain coat with a pink shirt, blue jeans, white socks, and striped Fruit of the Loom boxers size 30-32. He had a shoe insole of size 8 ½ to size 9. A white t-shirt with a Myrtle Beach logo was also found with the body. The cause of death was from multiple stab wounds. Dental records along with a full body X-Ray and DNA are available.
